Presented by Dr. Robert Musil

President and CEO of the Rachel Carson Council

Thursday, October 26, 2017

7 p.m.

Center for the Environment, Room 300

His presentation is free and open to the public, but registration is required. Click here to register.

Rachel Carson's writing was first inspired by North Carolina where she traveled often and loved its beaches and natural beauty. Musil discusses how the Rachel Carson Council, her legacy organization, works to protect the North Carolina environment and citizens today from the proposed Atlantic Coast Pipeline, expanding industrial chicken farms, clear cutting for wood pellet export, and more.

Musil is a former executive director and CEO of the Nobel Peace Prize-winning Physicians for Social Responsibility. A senior fellow and adjunct professor of the Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies at American University, he has also been a visiting scholar at the Churches' Center for Theology and Public Policy at Wesley Theological Seminary, where he taught about religious responses to global warming and security threats.

Free and open to the public. Registration required.

The Rachel Carson Council, founded in 1965, is the national environmental organization envisioned by Rachel Carson to carry on her work after her death. We promote Carson's ecological ethic that combines scientific concern for the environment and human health with a sense of wonder and reverence for all forms of life in order to build a sustainable, just, and peaceful future.
